Q2. Does this mean I won't have to have my language proficiency assessed?

A2. No. You still need to have your language proficiency assessed and meet the language proficiency requirement.

Q3. Do these changes apply to any other Nursing Regulatory Bodies?

A3. This change applies only to CLPNNL. Please check the website of the Regulatory Bodies you are considering applying to for registration or licensure to find out about their specific requirements.

Q4. I have an application currently open with NNAS. I identified CLPNNL as one the recipients of my Advisory Reports. I want to defer my language requirement until after the NNAS process. Can I do so?

A4. Yes. You can defer the language requirement until after the NNAS process at any time while your application is open, and your review is in process.

Q5. How do I defer the language requirement until after the NNAS process if I am applying to CLPNNL?

A5. To defer the language requirement, go into the Dashboard section of your online portal and then go to the Application Status link for your CLPNNL order. The Passing Language Score requirement will include a selectable option that indicates that CLPNNL allows for passing of language requirements to occur after the advisory report is issued. Once you have selected this option you will then be asked to click on a box if you wish to defer the language requirement for CLPNNL until after you complete the NNAS process.

Q6. I have applied to several Regulatory Bodies including CLPNNL. If I defer my language requirement for CLPNNL, will this impact my application to other Regulatory Bodies?

A6. You will need to meet the requirements of all Regulatory Bodies you are applying to before your Advisory Report can be issued. If you have identified other Regulatory Bodies as the recipient of your Advisory Report, your Report will not be issued to those Regulatory Bodies until you meet all their requirements.

Q7. Can I port my Advisory Report to another Regulatory Body if I waived the language requirement for CLPNNL?

A7. Yes, you can. However, you will be required to meet the language requirement along with all other policies and requirements of each Regulatory Body to which you are applying.

Q8. Can I still submit language test scores to NNAS even if I am applying to CLPNNL?

A8. Yes. You can still submit language test scores and CLPNNL will accept them as proof that you have met the language requirement. This remains the most efficient way to meet the language requirement.
